

GRIET VAN MALDEREN

Born in 1970 in the Belgian region of Flanders, Griet VAN MALDEREN has become a wildlife photographer following a simple family safari in South Africa in 2008. She developed a passionate affinity for the continent, its landscapes, flora, and fauna.

Since then, Griet has traveled extensively to various parts of Africa, including Kenya, South Africa, Namibia, Tanzania, Congo, Botswana, and Zimbabwe. More recently, she has explored Antarctica, Chile, Brazil, Canada, Norway, the Tonga Islands, and Japan.

Her preferred style of photography is black and white, occasionally applying sepia tones. Griet also produces platinum and collodion prints. Her approach differs from her colleagues in that she doesn't force her subjects to pose for her photographs. Instead, she invests time in gaining their trust, capturing their genuine emotions and sentiments. Some describe her style as feminine.

Beyond capturing wildlife, Griet extends her focus to landscapes as well as the men and women whose nature and soul exude strength and mystery.

Griet VAN MALDEREN generously donates a portion of her photo sales proceeds to organizations and individuals actively involved in protecting vulnerable animal populations in their natural habitats. Additionally, she works to raise awareness within local communities to ensure harmonious coexistence with these species. Griet also supports causes closer to home, particularly those pertaining to women's health.
